ASEAN Folding Container Wholesale

Overview

Are empty containers a problem in ASEAN?

Many Member States have struggled to access empty containers throughout the pandemic. ASEAN does not currently have any shipping container manufacturing capabilities. Allowing international vessels to move empty containers has helped facilitate their repositioning, but this still requires one-off licences in some Member States.

Why are container shipping services in the ASEAN region unreliable?

Container shipping services in the ASEAN region became unreliable, in part because vessels were redeployed to more lucrative Asia-US or Asia-Europe routes. Slow container circulation left the region's exporters with a shortage of empty containers. These issues rippled through port and hinterland operations, causing delays throughout supply chains.

How can ASEAN improve liner shipping?

Measures, such as capping shipping rates, would likely cause shipping lines to divert services to more commercially viable routes. However, as market concentration becomes more visible, ASEAN could work with international partners to increase coordination against further consolidation in the liner shipping industry.

How can ASEAN improve port capacity & hinterland connectivity?

Member States could: Improve port capacity and hinterland connectivity. Congested transshipment hubs across Asia have provided an opportunity for ASEAN mid-tier ports to attract more direct calls. To capitalise on this, ports must provide connected and competitive port capacity ahead of time.
